

Director, Institutional Marketing
Fronteer Gold
Vancouver, British Columbia

Sell a success story around the world and reap the rewards

You won't find a more professional, long term management approach to exploration and development than at Fronteer Gold. Moving into production and among the most well capitalized companies in its space, it's no wonder that Fronteer Gold is continuously listed as one of BC's Top 50 publicly traded companies. Reporting directly to the President & CEO, you will be a key, credible and knowledgeable representative of the organization with North American and global institutional investors.

As the head of institutional marketing, Fronteer Gold will look to you for your broad understanding of the institutional investor landscape and to bring first hand knowledge of the information investors need to make decisions. Working closely with the President & CEO, you will be responsible for creating a strong public market profile and broadening the shareholder base by developing and implementing institutional marketing, sales, and investor relations strategies that maximize relationships with capital markets, shareholders and members of the investment community.

A buy side analyst or investment banker with a strong understanding of the mining sector, or a mining company executive, you have infinite sales credibility with institutional clients. Alternatively, you are an investor relations professional with experience in the resource sector or are an investment advisor with a strong understanding of the capital markets. Although not required, a CFA designation would be an asset. Regardless, you have a hunger to succeed and an appetite for travel.
