A full day seminar on ESG Mechanisms in Indian Financial Institutions organized by IIT Bombay and Maharashtra Pollution Control Board (MPCB).

India has a large and growing need for investments in industrial and infrastructure projects. These projects are generally financed by Indian and international financial institutions, and require environmental clearance and consent from regulators under the provisions of Environmental (Protection) Act, 1986 and Water/Air (P&CP) Acts.

On one side, regulators are trying to enforce regulations to ensure sustainable development through various innovative governance tools like environment standards, covenants, and public disclosures. On the other side, Multi-lateral Banks (MDBs) like World bank and ADB, and local institutions have their own environmental and social safeguard policies and accountability mechanisms to address the concerns of project-affected people.

However, the efforts of both environmental regulators and these financial institutions are stand-alone and there is limited linkage between these two critical sectors which can provide an effective model for supporting sustainable investment/finance in development projects.

IIT Bombay and Maharashtra Pollution Control Board (MPCB) has organized a one-day seminar to discuss the possible way forward to deliberate India specific strategies, policies, and interventions required to ensure sustainable finance in development projects. It is proposed to invite the banking and financial regulators including RBI and SEBI, as well as financial institutions and banks, to help take the deliberations further.
