Jiten Parmar is an entrepreneur and a passionate long-term investor. After completing engineering in Computer Science from Mumbai University in 1990, he got the opportunity to work with HP in Mountain View, California in 1992. He co-founded a Java consulting company in 1995 in the US. He sold his company to a Nasdaq-listed company in 1998-99. This made him financially-independent at the age of 30. His timing turned out to be good, as the dotcom crash happened in 2000. He returned to India in 1999 and started with other businesses like real estate development and a packaging company.

He has been investing in the market since 1993, starting with US equities and then Indian equities in 2002. Reading financials and balance sheets didn't come naturally to him due to his science background, but over time he learned it. He also started understanding economics, market cycles and business cycles. Investing has taught him to be a lifelong learner. In 2018, he started Aurum Capital, a SEBI-registered Investment Advisory firm.
