Patrick Temple-West
Journalist
Financial Times

Patrick Temple-West is a journalist at the Financial Times in New York covering ESG and sustainability issues. He has written about asset managers, rule makers in the ESG sector—such as the Sustainable Accounting Standards Board—as well as the sustainable investing deals involving biofuels and recyclable coffee cups.

Before joining the Financial Times, Mr. Temple-West was in Washington, D.C., covering financial regulations and reported internationally from Brazil, Nigeria, Taiwan, and Turkey. Earlier in his career, he was a correspondent for Reuters and Politico in Washington, DC covering taxes and financial regulations. He is a graduate of Northwestern University's journalism school.
